As the week advanced the general features of the market remained much the same. Only a beggarly supply of good to prime animals came in, and as there was a fair inquiry for that class, sales were readily effected at previous figures. Lower grades, however, were e ceedingly dull at a decline from last week's prices of fully 25c; indeed, it was scarcely possible to make sales after that concession. The attention of shippers was given to the range cattle in preference to the common and medium grades of natives, and it is said some of the logst desirable of the latter changed hands at a drop of himself of the latter than the latter changed hands at a drop of himself PETROLEUM MARKET.

Range cattle comprised the larger part of the entire daily receipts, and atthough the demand was active seller's were obliged to accept lower prices for all except the best qualities.

There was more inquiry for stockers, but the increased offerings kept the market weak. weak.

As the week drew to a close there was no marked change in the market for ship ping cattle. The supply of native stuff adapted to the requirements of the trade was singularly small. The demand was not very lively, however, as Eastern advices were discouraging, and even for the best beeves, had any considerable number of such been offered, it would have been impossible to obtain the slightest advance.

Butchers and cannels succeeded in getting all the cows and bulls they wanted at pretty low prices, and the poorest lots were frequently hard to sell at reductions of 10@15c.
